

END OF LONG HOME RULE FIGHT IS NEAR

Month Likely to See Passage of Measure Through English House of Commons for Third Time.

BECOMES LAW WITHOUT APPROVAL OF THE LORDS

Disestablishment of Welsh Church and Abolition of Plural Voting Also Likely to be Decided.

(By Special Wire to Evening Herald.)

London, May 12.—This month probably will see the passage through the house of commons of three great controversial measures: home rule for Ireland; disestablishment of the Welsh church and the abolition of plural voting. The first two will have been passed for the third time under the parliament act, and no matter what the house of lords do with them they will become law. The plural voting bill still has another time to pass through the house of commons.

The greatest interest is taken in the home rule bill. There has been much talk of compromise and settlement by consent, but the best informed opinion of the country is that nothing in this direction will be done in the house of commons, and any settlement must be reached when the bill is before the lords.

The Nationalists and other Unionists have stated their demands quite plainly and there seems no room for compromise between them. The Nationalists have agreed to the temporary exclusion of Ulster from the operation of the bill, while the Ulstermen demand permanent exclusion. Neither side apparently will recede, although Nationalists have been heard to say that perhaps there will be a little more concession to "save the face of the Ulster leaders, but no exclusion." It was thought Mr. Halibut, who knows his Ireland well, would be the man to find common ground on which the opposing leaders could meet, but his speech at the Hyde Park demonstration, in which he spoke against compromise, has ruled him out, and now it is for the lords to find the way out, if the question is to be settled by consent.

There has been talk of a federal system for the whole of the United Kingdom, and it has been suggested that Ulster should be excluded from the home rule bill until this system is inaugurated, when she could choose the state which she would join. The federal system, however, raises another difficulty. Many of the great Belfast merchants do the bulk of their business with the people of the south and west of Ireland. These merchants are opposed to home rule but say if home rule must come they do not want their province excluded. The bankers of Belfast take the same view.

It is the opinion of a wealthy Belfast businessman:

"Sir Edward Carson's demand for the complete and unconditional exclusion of Ulster need not be taken seriously. We all know that the Nationalists would never think of accepting such a proposal. We know quite as well that it would be impracticable if it possibly could be accepted. No one can tell better than myself how closely the interests of this province are bound up with those of the rest of Ireland. Four commercial travelers from my house are almost continually in the south and west. Within the past week we have received orders for new season's goods from Cork, Limerick, Clonmel, Roscrea, and Sligo, reaching £5,000. A very slight curtailment of such a trade would mean all the difference between a good profit and a loss, leading to bankruptcy. The people of the south and west are great consumers. I should think that the volume of business between the Nationalist party of the country and Belfast alone has quadrupled within the last fifteen years. Quite apart from politics, the bitterness that would inevitably arise were Ulster or any part of it cut off from Ireland would result in the destruction of the biggest warehouses we have in a year. Of course, I should vote against a home rule candidate, but I should vote and canvas against the separation of Ulster, and especially of Belfast, from Ireland for a moment."

Now that the government has safely weathered the crisis over the refusal of officers to serve against the Ulster volunteers' Liberal members of parliament have returned to their old demand that there shall be no general election until the bill to abolish plural voting has become law. This bill was passed through the house of commons last year for the first time but was promptly thrown out by the lords. It is being introduced for the second time this year, and if the lords repeat their action of last year, it will have to be passed in a third session to become a law despite their veto.

Of course if the Unionists agree to let the bill go through this year the Liberals will consent to a general election, but otherwise the rank and file of the party and the Laborites as well, will fight to the last to prevent an appeal to the electors until they are sure that they do not have to fight with the advantage of the plural voter, who in the mind of every Liberal must be a Unionist. An Irish Nationalist leader, who probably knows the minds of the back bench Liberal as well as any man in the house of commons, said recently:

EX-CONVICTS FIGHT ON MEETING IN CITY JAIL

night for creating a disturbance on the street.

When Molina was put in the cage at the station house his gang fell on Cruz, who is serving a fifteen-day sentence. Recognition was mutual so was the feeling experienced. There had been bad blood between them in the penitentiary and it broke out without Moisy when the two met in the stationhouse cage. Molina and Cruz came together with a rush as soon as the door was locked on the newcomer, and when Moisy, attracted by the noise of the fight, returned he found Molina jammed in a corner with Cruz pounding him. The prisoners were separated and locked in separate cells.

When Molina was arrested he had with him a telescope bag in which were found about three dozen hammered silver bracelets, a number of fancy bracelets, bangles and twenty silver shoe buckles. He said he made the things during his stay in the penitentiary.

Molina will be arraigned before Judge Criss in the city police court of trial for breaking, arrested Molina last Saturday morning.

Quick Action Getting The Blood in Order

There's Bounding, Pulsating Life in Every Drop of Great Remedy.

Let S. S. S. Hustle Impurities Outward.

Impurities lodge so deeply in the tissues that they cannot be reached by any ordinary method of cleaning and often drugs must clean them. But get right down into where the blood is vitiated requires S. S. S., the greatest blood purifier known. Its action is positive and rapid.

In a very brief time S. S. S. has the reconstructive process as under control that remarkable changes are observed. All those places where a mysterious pain and ache have disappeared, and from head to foot there is conscious sensation of renewed health.

The extraordinary manner in which S. S. S. drives impurities out of the blood is due to its catalytic force in the blood cells, causing one impurity to drive out the other, which in turn stimulates the healthy selection of its own essential nutriment and the medicinal elements of this matchless blood purifier are just as es-
